More than 50. This is the number of water wells we have dug in developing countries, including India and Africa. We understand that when you give a village access to clean water, the biggest impact is on the women and girls, who can use the many hours they would otherwise spend collecting water for their education and jobs to support their families.

We are committed to digging wells of economic opportunity that will impact generations.

In our latest endeavor, the Overcomer Foundation, we will provide financial assistance for child care expenses to single mothers who are striving toward the next level in their education. We are empowering the women in our community to move their families off the benefits cliff to economic stability, impacting generations to come.

MARK CURRIDEN

SENIOR LEGAL AFFAIRS WRITER | THE TEXAS LAWBOOK

Mark Curriden is a lawyer/journalist and founder of The Texas Lawbook. In addition, he is a contributing legal correspondent for The Houston Chronicle and the Dallas Business Journal.

Mark is the author of the best selling book Contempt of Court: A Turn-of-the-Century Lynching That Launched a Hundred Years of Federalism. The book received the American Bar Association's Silver Gavel Award and numerous other honors. He also is a frequent lecturer at bar associations, law firm retreats, judicial conferences and other events. His CLE presentations have been approved for ethics credit in nearly every state.

From 1988 to 1994, Mark was the legal affairs writer for the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, where he covered the Georgia Supreme Court and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. He authored a three-part series of articles that exposed rampant use of drug dealers and criminals turned paid informants by local and federal law enforcement authorities, which led to Congressional oversight hearings. A related series of articles by Mark contributed to a wrongly convicted death row inmate being freed.

The Dallas Morning News made Mark its national legal affairs writer in 1996. For more than six years, Mark wrote extensively about the tobacco litigation, alleged price-fixing in the pharmaceutical industry, the Exxon Valdez litigation, and more than 25 cases before the Supreme Court of the United States. Mark also authored a highly-acclaimed 16-part series on the future of the American jury system. As part of his extensive coverage of the tobacco litigation, Mark unearthed confidential documents and evidence showing that the then Texas Attorney General, Dan Morales, had made a secret deal with a long-time lawyer and friend in which the friend would have profited hundreds of millions of dollars from the tobacco settlement. As a direct result of Mark's articles, the U.S. Department of Justice opened a criminal investigation, which led to the indictment and conviction of Mr. Morales.

For the past 25 years, Mark has been a senior contributing writer for the ABA Journal, which is the nation's largest legal publication. His articles have been on the cover of the magazine more than a dozen times. He has received scores of honors for his legal writing, including the American Bar Association's Silver Gavel Award, the American Judicature Society's Toni House Award, the American Trial Lawyer's Amicus Award, and the Chicago Press Club's Headliner Award. Twice, in 2001 and 2005, the American Board of Trial Advocates named Mark its "Journalist of the Year."

From 2002 to 2010, Mark was the senior communications counsel at Vinson & Elkins, a 750-lawyer global law firm.

Mark's book, Contempt of Court, tells the story of Ed Johnson, a young black man from Chattanooga, Tenn., in 1906. Johnson was falsely accused of rape, railroaded through the criminal justice system, found guilty and sentenced to death – all in three weeks. Two African-American lawyers stepped forward to represent Johnson on appeal. In doing so, they filed one of the first federal habeas petitions ever attempted in a state criminal case. The lawyers convinced the Supreme Court of the United States to stay Johnson's execution. But before they could have him released, a lynch mob, aided by the sheriff and his deputies, lynched Johnson. Angered, the Supreme Court ordered the arrest of the sheriff and leaders of the mob, charging them with contempt of the Supreme Court. It is the only time in U.S. history that the Supreme Court conducted a criminal trial.

Our specialists and consultants serve clients across industries in both the private and public sectors. RVM is headquartered in Jersey City, New Jersey with offices across the United States and a global presence via an office in London, U.K. A leader in legal technology, RVM leverages best-in-breed tools coupled with cutting edge workflows. Since its founding in 1996 RVM has been serving its clients faithfully as a firm specializing in document production and review. During that time we have kept in step with an industry that is expanding by leaps and bounds, largely because of our business model that emphasizes partnership with our clients. This enables us to be more understanding of their needs, and in turn to be better prepared to assist them moving forward. When we started, discovery consisted of small teams of attorneys or paralegals shuffling through boxes of paper documents. Those small teams and bankers boxes have given way to large teams pushing through electronic documents loaded into specialized review platforms. The technology has gotten faster. The data has gotten bigger. And, the stakes have gotten higher. Today, RVM is proud to be a leader among our peers. Our desire to be the best for our clients is evident in all aspects of our business, from our consulting and eDiscovery services to our development of innovative technological tools.

At Bodhala, the leading tech platform enabling corporate legal teams to analyze and optimize their spend, we built a one-of-a-kind data set that employs machine learning to give GCs and CFOs the advanced tools to understand not just the what of their legal spend, but the why.

No matter where we come from,
we come together.

While each one of us is an original, we all have something in common: we all want to belong. So we strive to invite different perspectives to drive our innovation and different stories to build our culture. When we do, we end up in a place we all want to be.

See what we're made of.
